Excerpt: .here there is a point in which the two cases may be brought into comparison. It was through the act of prayer, when His human soul was holding close communion with God, that His face did shine as the sun. It has been repeated in a lesser degree with the saints. 1 Many of the Fathers think this was only partially fulfilled in the person of John the Baptist, and expect that Elijah will really appear to restore the Jews before the Second Advent. Cf. Chrysos., Horn. lvii. on S. Matt.; Aug., Tract, iv. on S. John. Even so we remember it was after Moses had been communing with God in the mount, speaking with Him face to face, that his very skin seemed to catch the rays of Divine glory, and the people were dazzled by the reflection. Again it was of one...
