Excerpt: . ii the far west at close range Fate takes up my challenge--The dashing adventurer --Travelling through forest fires--Silence, the first lesson of the West--A steamerette on the Columbia--Snags, Cliffs, and Rapids--The mail bag and the mail carrier--I hit the hotel-- Farewell, beloved umbrella! --Rivers in flood--Sixty miles of stage over switchback trails--A tight place--The pious brigand--Mother and Son--The shanty on the hill--A lonely night--My landlady and her philosophy--A bachelor s cabin--His menu--A prosperous invalid--My study in the hay loft--Summer gold and Winter splendours. fate has a startling way of taking one at one s word--or a part of it--sometimes. I remember that, some nine or ten years ago, I was playing round in New York, very much pleased with myself, and things in general, when I received a letter from my eldest son, begging me to return to England, and describing, very charmingly, I must say, the delights of English rural life. In spite of published dates--and photographs--I was feeling at the time about twenty-five years old, and I replied by saying that I should die of boredom in the country in England, and by giving a list of the different homes I meant to have in the States, ending up with a shanty on the Pacific Slope. Not very long after I flung out that defiance I found the last item of it realised. Purely by accident, and much to my own surprise, the shanty had become my home; and a very...
